ABOUT NICHOLAS

Born to a Ghanaian father and an African American mother, Nicholas is very passionate about his cultural roots. Nicholas has obtained global media attention for his nonprofit business savvy and philanthropic work at such a young age. He has dedicated his 501c3 nonprofit, Books Without Borders, Inc., to help equip youth in underserved communities with educational resources to help them thrive and break barriers.

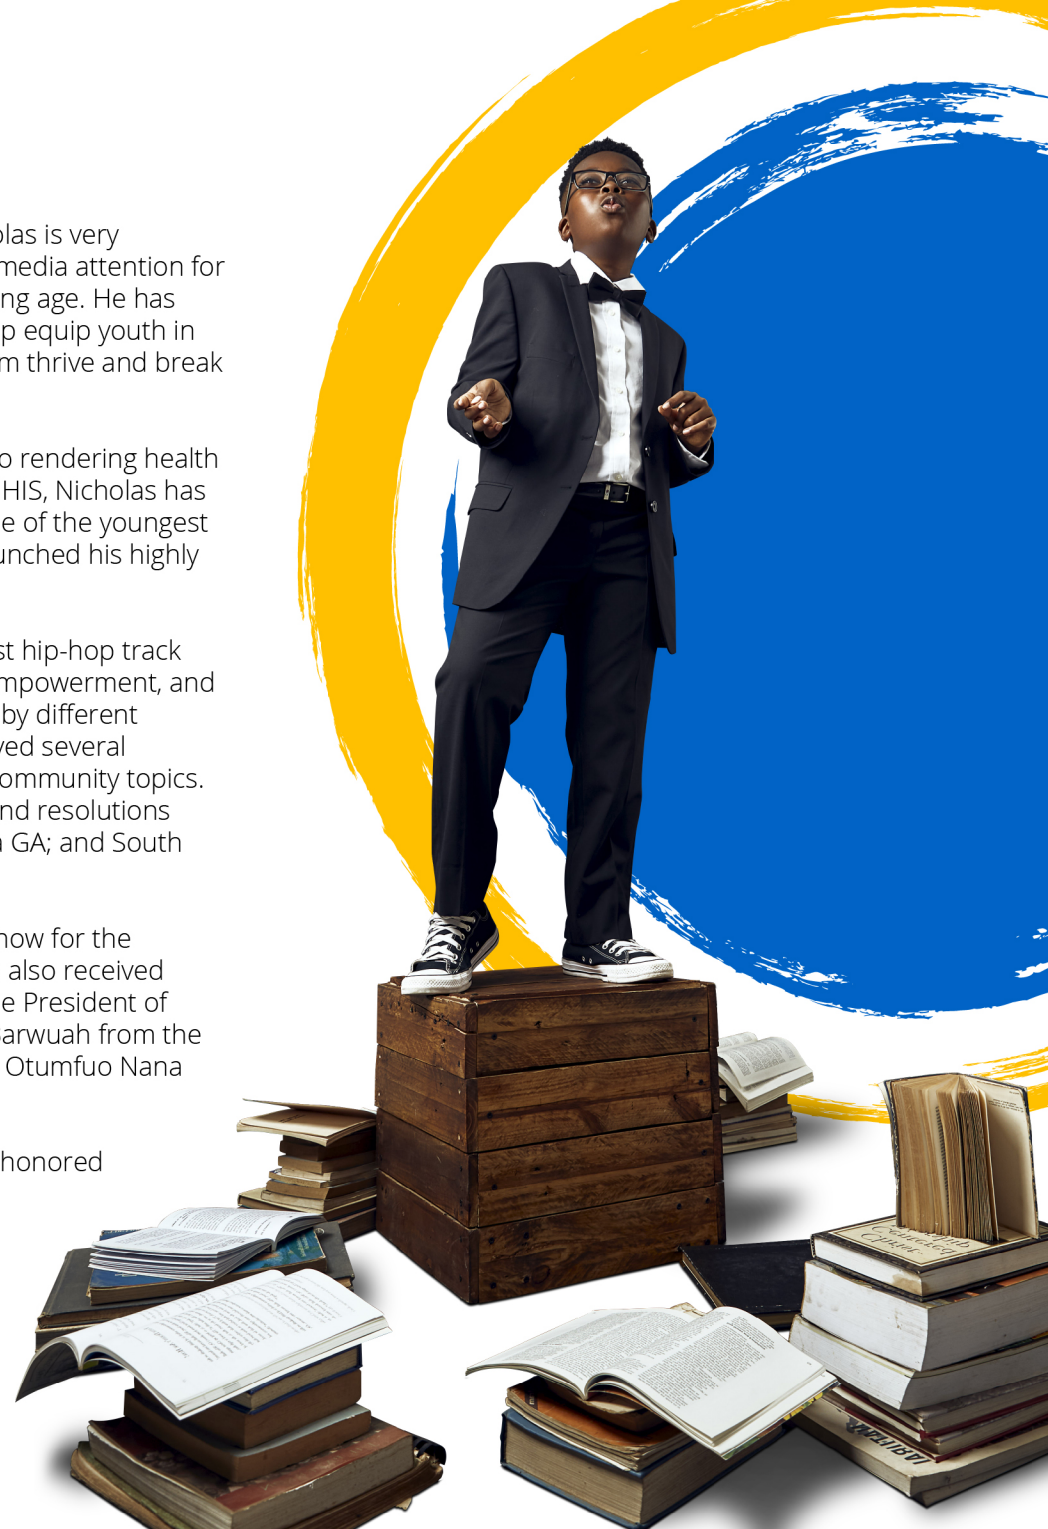

From donating school supplies to children through his nonprofit to rendering health insurance services to over 1,500 Ghanaian children through the NHIS, Nicholas has ignited an international presence and footprint in Ghana. He is one of the youngest recording artists and music producers registered with BMI and launched his highly anticipated musical debut, "On the Clock," on Feb. 14, 2021.

Nicholas is the co-writer and executive producer on the multi-artist hip-hop track and music video, bringing youthful positivity to social justice, kid empowerment, and personal affirmation. Recognized domestically and internationally by different celebrities, public figures, and political leaders, Nicholas has received several accolades for using his voice and talents to bring light to various community topics. He received the GUBA Award alongside receiving proclamations and resolutions from different city officials and mayors from Snellville, GA; Lithonia GA; and South Bend, IN.

Nicholas was named as ambassador to the Opemsuo Kid Radio Show for the Manhyia Palace Media in Kumasi, Ghana. In addition, Nicholas has also received recognition and has met global influencers and leaders such as the President of Ghana, Dr. Nana Kufo-Addo, Ambassador H.E. Dr. Barfuor Adjei- Barwuah from the Ghana Embassy in Washington D.C. as well as your Royal Magesty Otumfuo Nana Osei Tutu II, who is currently enstooled as the Asantehene.

Nicholas has garnered many accolades to be proud of, one being honored by EGOT alumni Whoopi Goldberg for Black History Month.

Nicholas broke headlines amid his memorable appearance on "The Steve Harvey Show," where the show's host purchased 555 books - for Nicholas' nonprofit - to send to Ghana.

NICK'S HOUSE

11 year-old business mogul and published author takes his writing talents to television with new sitcom "Nick's House".

Nicholas is an innovator and the face of one of the nation's newest up-and-coming comedy-based TV sitcoms. He's adding "Nick's House" TV show creator, writer, and executive producer to his broad array of booming talents.

Nicholas may be the mastermind behind his new show "Nick's House," but he's certainly not alone in bringing the sitcom to life.

Award-winning TV veterans LaMont Ferrell and Reshaun Jones are also helping him turn his dreams into a reality.

Directed and co-written by award-winning Hollywood producer Ferrel, "Nick's House" is centered around Nicholas and his two friends, Janae Madison and Cavanaugh Bell, as they run a successful consulting firm assisting other young moguls out of Nicholas' parents' home.

Ferrel - who has been recognized for his production work for renowned shows such as "Girlfriends," "Mo'Nisha," "The Office" and "Tyler Perry's House of Payne" - will work alongside Nicholas and the show's associate producer Toiya Tillman, co-writer Reshaun Jones, and producer Gia Compton.

In production and set to debut in 2022, the show features well-known comedian Boogie B. Montrell, as Nicholas' immature uncle who moves into the family home to help care for him while his parents are away on business.

Nicholas' adventurous and entrepreneurial-minded friends, who live nearby, visit frequently, adding to the fun chaos.

Nicholas and his powerhouse team are in the process of pitching the show to mainstream TV networks.

Nick's Christmas Extravaganza

Nicholas had an idea to start a Christmas campaign to help families during the pandemic. He decided to call it, "Nick's Christmas Extravaganza." Nicholas raised more than $14,000 and was able to purchase food and toys for several families with help from the late NFL football player Demaryius Thomas. It was such a huge success that Nicholas decided to make it an annual campaign.

Nicholas's campaign, "Nick's Christmas Extravaganza" was able to purchase healthcare insurance for 1500 children through the NHIS in Ghana. He was also able to gift a 6th grade student in Kumasi Ghana who crawled to school every day with an electric wheelchair for Christmas.

Nicholas is still in the planning stage of deciding on this years "Nick's Christmas Extravaganza"
